

Tips to Save Money While Traveling in Vietnam

We all love to travel to Vietnam; any chance for a perfect gateway will always makes us happy. Traveling or touring is the golden idea to rejuvenate and freshen up all the energy. But, after coming back from a trip, you may often realize that you have actually spent more money than you thought. And many of you may cancel the trip due to the financial crunch. Well not any more, here are some valuable tips to save money without compromising on the fun factor.

It's always best to carry snacks and drinks, as hotel mini bar will cost a bomb for it. You can buy a small cooler to store the perishables, in case you have to travel quite often. Also, many hotels in Hanoi, Ho Chi Minh City and other cities can have the small refrigerator. If you are a movie buff, then carry your own DVDs or the Laptop instead of spending money on these facilities offered by the hotels. Try hard not to use the credit card, as when you are in a tourist destination, you will be slapped with heavy amounts for the transactions, so pay cash each time you buy something.

Find out the proper charges before you make any calls as this will be added to the overall bills when you will be checking out. Try not to call frequently. If you know someone in the local areas, then try to be familiar with the various transportation fares, as maximum amount of money you will be spending on it. Also, people try to take the advantage of your lack of proper knowledge.

Most importantly, try hard not to plan the trip during peak travel days. During the peak days the airlines charge more. Catch a flight on non-peak hour that will save your money. Also, you can utilize the special discount offered by the airlines and you can apply Vietnam visa on arrival online. Shopping is a major attraction of any tour. But if you are swayed by the temptation then your pocket will simply be empty, so try to control the desperation to buy the whole shop. Shop only for specific things, that, too after proper bargaining. Plan the trip beforehand to avoid any hassles.

These tips will allow you to enjoy the trip to the fullest without a large credit dept.
